On June 10, 2026, the American College of Obstetricians & Gynecologists (ACOG) released its 2026 Maternal Immunization Schedule, which is formally endorsed by 15 medical societies. More than 60 organizations have issued the following statement in support of the schedule:

“Our organizations strongly support ACOG's Maternal Immunization Schedule because these recommendations are grounded in the latest scientific data, which confirm vaccines are safe and effective for patients and their developing pregnancies. Maternal immunizations are the most effective way to reduce maternal, fetal, and infant complications from vaccine-preventable diseases. ACOG's schedule is a trustworthy guide for clinicians, patients, families, and communities.

“Consider integrating ACOG's immunization schedule into your patients' prenatal packets, so patients have time to become familiar with the recommendations and ask questions at their routine prenatal visits. We recommend that all pregnant, postpartum, or lactating patients talk to their obstetric clinicians about ACOG's schedule and which vaccines they need.”
